KEY TERMS

For the purpose of providing a unified and clear understanding of this guide, definitions of the key terms used throughout the document are provided in the following table:

Term	Definition
College	Any staff member who holds the responsibility for supervising, coordinating, and managing the overall planning and implementation of the field experience training course at the college level. This may include any of the following: Head of Department, Field Experience Unit or any other staff member in charge of such matters.
Faculty Member	A member of the teaching staff at the college who is assigned authority and responsibility of supervising and evaluating the training of the student.
Student	Any student that is eligible to apply for the field experience training course.
Training Organization	Any institution that has been approved by the college to provide practical training to students in their field experience training course.
Field Instructor	A representative working at the training organization who is responsible for supervising, training and evaluating the student throughout the training period.

INTRODUCTION

Field experience training is an important part of any academic program as it provides students with the opportunity to practically apply the knowledge and skills acquired throughout their academic programs. This guide is aimed at providing colleges at the Saudi Electronic University with the mechanism that maximizes the benefits for students during their field experience training. It also ensures the attainment of high quality in compliance with the National Center for Academic Accreditation and Assessment (NCAAA) standards.

The guide offers specific guidelines for colleges to follow when planning and implementing their field experience training course. This includes all the processes that are needed to be performed before the training period commences. Such processes include setting out requirements for choosing appropriate training organizations and assigning field instructors. The guide also includes the processes essential during the training period such as specifying the role and responsibilities of faculty members who will supervise students during their field experience training. It emphasizes the importance of setting out clear procedures for resolving any conflicts that might arise between the student and the training organization. In addition, an assessment and evaluation plan has been provided which includes a clear distribution of marks.

THE FIELD EXPERIENCE TRAINING PROCESS

The process of the field experience training course is divided into the following 3 phases:

PHASE 1: BEFORE THE TRAINING

Before the field training process commences, the college must ensure the following:

1. The requirements and prerequisites for starting the training course must be specified by the college.
2. The minimum number of training hours for students must be specified by the college.
3. The college should build a portfolio of partnerships with training organizations that provide high-level training opportunities. This database of potential field experience partners should be made available to students and they should be encouraged to conduct their training there.
4. The college must specify the minimum requirements for selecting the training organization including competencies, efficiency and safety of the training organizations. These requirements are initially checked through online investigations, email and telephone calls exchanged between the college and the training organization. However, these requirements will be further evaluated and confirmed on the field visit conducted by the faculty member.
5. If the student chooses to train in their current employment organization, he/she must train at a different department.
6. The college must list the minimum skill requirements needed to determine appropriate field instructors (i.e. list of qualifications and responsibilities).
7. The college must take into consideration the appropriate distribution of students to faculty members to allow for proper conduction of all responsibilities of the faculty member. Therefore, it is recommended that the ratio of students to faculty members should range from 10:1 up to 25:1.
8. The name and contact details of the training organization and field instructor who will be responsible for the student must be provided.
9. All the required training skills and responsibilities that are expected to be acquired by the student must be identified, documented and made clear to the student.

10. The type of final product that is expected to be submitted by the student at the end of the training course (report, presentation or interview) must be specified by the college.
11. Clear procedures must be set in place by the college if a conflict arises between the student and the training organization.
12. Clear procedures must be set in place by the college if contradicting or differing evaluations have been given by the faculty member and the field instructor.

PHASE 2: DURING THE TRAINING

The college must specify the role and responsibilities of faculty members who will supervise students during their field experience training. The responsibilities include the following:

1. The faculty member must schedule a minimum of 3 online sessions to allow students to attend and discuss any issues that might be facing them. The first session should be an orientation session which must be scheduled within the first 2 weeks of the training course and it should be made mandatory for all students to attend. This orientation session is an essential part of the training course where the faculty member is required to explain all the requirements of the field experience training course as well as the complete evaluation process that the student will undergo throughout the training course.
2. A field visit must be made, towards the middle of the training period, to ensure:
  - a. Commitment of the student by performing the responsibilities that have been previously agreed upon.
  - b. Suitability of the organization in terms of size, learning resources and safety (Evaluation Form 1).
  - c. The training organization and field instructor are giving the student the adequate level of support (Evaluation Form 1).

PHASE 3: AFTER THE TRAINING

To ensure the level and quality of the training received from the training organization, the college must do the following:

1. The student must evaluate and give feedback about the overall experience of the training course (Evaluation Form 2). This includes:
  - a. Evaluating the experience the student had with the training organization and how much he/she benefited from the organization and the field instructor.
  - b. Evaluating the experience the student had with the faculty member and the level of support received.
2. The college should build partnerships with training organizations that have shown a high level of commitment in training students. They should also maintain a database of all the training organizations and include the level of commitment received from each. This is to help the college make decisions with regards to sending future students to train at these organizations.

ASSESSMENT & EVALUATION

The college must specify the assessment mechanism that will be followed to evaluate the student. There should be a clear distribution of the marks according to the following:

1. 20% of the mark should count towards the evaluation of the faculty member regarding the performance and progress of the student (Evaluation Form 3). This should be distributed as follows:
  - a. 5% on the attendance of the online orientation session.
  - b. 5% on the student's overall communication, engagement and attitude towards the training course.
  - c. 10% towards the performance of the student according to the field visit.
2. 30% of the mark should count towards the evaluation of the college regarding any required report, presentation or interview as initially set out by the college.
3. 50% of the mark should count towards the evaluation of the field instructor regarding the performance and progress of the student during the training period (Evaluation Form 4).
